

The youth ministry at St. John the Baptist Parish has so many things to offer. One of these things that I have had the pleasure of being involved with is the drama team. The drama team is a way for youth group leaders to get a message across in a fun and interesting way to the members of our parish. We get skits and routines together for many different events such as Holy Thursday and confirmation retreats. We work towards presenting God's message in the best way possible so that others can learn from us and really come to an understanding of what we are trying to tell them. The group of young people who participate in this group are very talented and hard-working, giving a lot of time and effort to making this team so successful.

The drama team is not only fun for me as a youth group leader, but it has also helped me to improve my personal skills. I have become more confident in my leadership abilities as well as being able to communicate my faith to others. Being a part of this team allowed me to discover talents that I didn't know I had, talents that can be used for spreading faith to others. I have never felt the need to perform in front of groups of people, but now I have a new purpose as the drama team gives me yet another way to connect with God. My nerves and self-consciousness go right out the window when I think about why I am doing it. It is for God that I am a member of the drama team, that I do my part to offer Him any talents and abilities that I have.
